A journal
establishing connections
between gestalt therapy
and other approaches

www.studies-in-gestalt.org

Now, as communities throughout the globe are confronting daily uncertainties, the world of psychotherapy is re-discovering paradigms of dialogue and interconnectedness at its core – often while using the theoretical language of different approaches. In this new play of figures and grounds, traditional concerns – body/mind, conscious/unconscious, rational/irrational, individual/social, theory/practice, experience/interpretation, and personal/political – are being re-examined in the light of relational perspectives and evidence based research.

Once nearly alone at this frontier of innovation, gestalt therapy today finds itself parallel with other contemporary psychotherapies. This journal is dedicated to exploring the development of gestalt therapy through dialogical bridges with other psychotherapeutic approaches.

We believe that our understanding and practice of gestalt therapy will deepen through this venture in contacting.
